

Celebrating the growth of the Canadian family

Jeanne and Hugh Bell Muller (centre and right) were among 35 new Canadians to take the oath of Canadian Citizenship at a swearing in ceremony held at Parks Canada's Alexander Graham Bell National Historic Site. The ceremony was all the more special for the Mullers as it took place at the site dedicated to his great grandfather's life and work.

grandson of Alexander Graham Bell. The Mullers were especially pleased to be involved in the ceremony at the historic site dedicated to Mr. Muller's great grandfather.

The public was invited to participate as the community welcomes this group of new Canadians. Those in attendance were invited to take the oath of citizenship with the new Canadians. Taking the oath of citizenship is a way to reaffirm one's commitment to Canada.

All new Canadians are legally required to take the oath of citizenship but most Canadians who were born here have never had the opportunity. For this reason, during citizenship ceremonies the judge usually invites everyone to participate in the oath.

North Highlands Community Museum New weather exhibit rainfall across the island, those events will be captured, and it is expected that interesting, potentially useful information will emerge. Whatever their scientific value, however, the results will certainly provide new content for everyone's favourite conversation topic – the weather.

Residents interested in participating in the Rainfall Network are asked to call the North Highlands Community Museum at 902-383-2579, or send an email to the project's email address at Downspill@gmail.com

Participants will receive information on how and where to set up a rain gauge, and how to report their data. Suitable rain gauges may be purchased at most hardware and garden stores, or at the Museum, for less than $10.

Participants in the rainfall network will receive a day's free admission to the North Highlands Community Museum's exhibits the summer, including the new, interactive Cape Breton weather exhibit.
